THEME: Peace:

Richard Wolin, in his book The Seduction of Unreason (2004), makes the case, citing a significant number of intellectuals, that “War is the primary politics of everything that lives”; that “War is an intoxication beyond all bonds”; that “Conflict is life. Man’s value depends upon his aggressive strength” (p. 160). Even if this claim is only partially true, it nonetheless suggests that the onus lies with those of us who hope for peace in communities that are now almost inevitably diverse and threaded through with tribalizing social media, that we articulate what sort of education might promote citizens who strive mightily for peace.

Song: Give Peace a Chance.

WHERE: Querétaro

Querétaro is a star travel destination in central Mexico and is recognized as one of Mexico’s 35 UNESCO World Heritage Sites. Its picturesque streets are sprinkled with great restaurants and patio bars which are deliciously inviting, given the mountain temps that regularly hover around 70°F (~21°C) during happy hour time.

EXCURSION: La Peña de Bernal

The third largest monolith in the world, is located in the town of Bernal not far from Querétaro, Mexico . The rock was formed from the lava from a now extinct volcano. The town was founded in the year 1642 , when several Spanish families took possession of the lands that were inhabited by indigenous Chichimecs. Though mining used to be the main occupation, in recent years Bernal sustains itself mainly from tourist activities. in February 2006 It was cataloged as “Magic Town” by the Ministry of Tourism of Mexico, “for its symbolic attributes, legends and history.”

EDUCATION FOR PEACE

Querétaro is famous for its wines and cheeses. Puerta de Lobo is one of the many vineyards near the city of Querétaro. The restaurant has a menú with a mexican/ mediterranean proposal, that uses only local products. The menú is accompanied with the wines they produce. There is also a wine bar, offering a magnificent view.
